Dear Professor Kim,

6th World Conference on Research Integrity

I write to invite you and your colleagues/research students to participate in the 6th World Conference on Research Integrity (6th WCRI) to be held at the University of Hong Kong on June 2-5, 2019.

2. The WCRI is the largest and most significant international conference on research integrity. The last WCRI was held in Amsterdam in 2017 and attracted almost 900 participants from all over the world, including researchers, teachers, funding agency representatives, government officials, journal editors, senior administrators, and research postgraduate students.

3. The theme of the 6th WCRI is 'New Challenges for Research Integrity', which will include discussion on open data, methods, access and other moves towards transparency in research; replication, reproducibility and research waste; managing research misconduct; education on responsible conduct of research; impact of cultural differences in fostering research; integrity in innovation and impact; and institutional assessment of researchers.

4. Registration is now invited and participants can enjoy the early registration rate from now until March 1, 2019. Please visit the conference website at www.wcri2019.org for further information. Please encourage relevant colleagues and students in your university to register for the conference. A few copies of the conference poster are enclosed for posting at your institution.

5. I look forward to meeting you and your colleagues/students at the 6th WCRI in June 2019.

Yours sincerely,

Professor Mai Har Sham
